

Explore HEALTH Careers.org

Do something that matters. For yourself. For others.

Take Advantage of Free Career Planning Tools on www.ExploreHealthCareers.org

ExploreHealthCareers.org is a FREE website that was created to help encourage young people, particularly underrepresented minorities and low income students, to explore career opportunities in the health care field. Support for the site was provided in part by a grant from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation in Princeton, New Jersey. The site is administered by the American Dental Education Association.

What Can You Do on ExploreHealthCareers.org?

- ▶ Find a health career that matches your educational plans and salary requirements.
Search more than 80 health careers to find job opportunities that fit your personal goals – including more than 25 careers you can train for in just two years after high school.
- ▶ Review profiles of 80+ health careers.
Most people think a “health career” means becoming a doctor or a nurse. In fact, there are many different health careers, including jobs that don’t involve caring for patients or working in a hospital or doctor’s office. On EHC, you can search dozens of health careers to find opportunities that fit your educational plans and your salary requirements. The career profiles on EHC are reviewed and approved by national health education and professional organizations, so you can trust the information to be current and accurate. Go to ExploreHealthCareers.org today to learn:
 - What health care workers do every day
 - How much money you can make as a health care worker
 - Academic requirements to qualify for more than 80 jobs
 - Links to more information about health careers
- ▶ Get tips to prepare now for a successful health career.
You don’t have to be a “straight-A student” to become a health care worker. EHC provides practical advice and interactive tools to help you find and qualify for training programs and prepare for a rewarding health career.
- ▶ Find funding for school. Don’t let money stop you from achieving your goals! On EHC, you’ll find an easy-to-use, searchable database with 500+ scholarships, grants and loans available for high school and college students, including funding specifically for minority and low income students.
- ▶ Enroll in summer programs and internships. Gain practical experience in the health care field and begin preparing for your future now with a searchable database of enrichment programs for high school, college and post-baccalaureate students. EHC also profiles students and working health care professionals, and maintains an extensive list of links where you can find additional career planning information and resources. While all information on ExploreHealthCareers.org is free, registering with your email address enables you to receive a quarterly eNewsletter and other special alerts about updates to the site.